

People of The Fuller Project

THE FULLER PROJECT is the award-winning global nonprofit newsroom dedicated to objective, groundbreaking reporting on women, to raise awareness, expose injustice and spur accountability. We are journalists guided by our own reporting experiences. Our correspondents in the U.S. and around the globe rigorously report on untold stories and the interconnected issues affecting women and their communities everywhere.

THE FULLER
PROJECT

JESSICA WASHINGTON | Journalist | jessica@fullerproject.org

were making a difference in their communities but weren't making the big headlines. For The Guardian, Jessica profiled Black female organizers in battleground states and in rural communities who have spent years working to organize Black and other marginalized voters.

During a year filled with systemic inequality, Jessica's reporting on racial and economic discrimination in the U.S. has underscored the disparate impact of the coronavirus on Black Americans. Her profile on pregnant Black women in Wisconsin revealed how they are disproportionately affected by the virus – including lack of access to quality care. Jessica also connects these issues as they relate to child care – reporting on the impossible decisions parents and child care providers have had to make throughout the pandemic.

Before joining The Fuller Project, Jessica covered reproductive health for Mother Jones, publishing more than 50 articles with a focus on access to care, the judiciary and state policies. Prior to working at Mother Jones, she worked for “All in With Chris Hayes” as a production assistant and digital content producer.

Her work has appeared in The Guardian, Marie Claire, The Nation, Mother Jones, NBC News, MSNBC, NBC News.com, and in The Daily Pennsylvanian.

Jessica graduated from the University of Pennsylvania where she was a staff writer for The Daily Pennsylvanian covering the diversity beat and focusing on race, religion, gender, and sexuality in relation to politics and campus dynamics. She is now based in Washington, D.C.

Jessica Washington is a reporter with The Fuller Project focused on women and economic and social inequity.

In Marie Claire UK, Jessica drew attention to the role women could play in ending the COVID-19 pandemic by reporting on female health care workers in Africa who continue to lead the frontlines the same way women were able to help eradicate wild polio.

During the 2020 presidential election, she brought attention to the Black women advocates who

RECENT REPORTING BY JESSICA INCLUDES:

Experts Apply Lessons From Ebola to Ensure Girls Return to School Post-Pandemic - The Fuller Project

Pregnant Black Women Navigate Two Public Health Crises During COVID-19 in Milwaukee - The Fuller Project

Lose Income or Risk Your Child's Health at Daycare? The Impossible Choice Low-Income Parents Face in Wisconsin - The Fuller Project

Child Care Workers Weigh COVID-19 Risks: "I Don't Want to Die." - The Fuller Project

100 Years On, Black Women Are Still Fighting For Voting Rights - The Fuller Project

"You're Basically Trying to Pick Your Poison": Persistent Inequality Weighs on Black Mothers During COVID-19 - The Fuller Project

Women Were Key to Eradicating Wild Polio in Africa. But Can They Do the Same for COVID? - Marie Claire

"Whatever it takes": how Black women fought to mobilize America's voters - The Guardian

"I Want to Move Forward": Student Moms Bear Costly Double Burden of Child Care Costs, Student Debt - The Fuller Project

Lessons from Texas: Advocates Warn of Extreme Weather's Link to Domestic Violence - The Fuller Project