

THE FULLER PROJECT

WHO

The Fuller Project is the global newsroom dedicated to groundbreaking reporting that catalyzes positive change for women. Since we launched in 2015, our reporting has influenced new legislation, helped end life-threatening practices, and led to large scale releases of public data.

WHY

Our reporting is relied on by policymakers, corporate leaders, influencers and individuals across the globe, leading to better outcomes for women and their communities. As women's standing in society improves, so does the potential for stronger democracies, and economic and political stability. A single authoritative story about women can create awareness to spark change.

WHAT

We report exclusive stories centered on women that otherwise would not be told. Our long-standing focus on women, especially those facing racial or other forms of bias, leads to journalism that by challenging conventional thinking inspires action.

HOW

Our journalists spotlight critical issues and expose injustice with in-depth reporting published in renowned news outlets such as The New York Times, The Washington Post and Foreign Policy, and inside the largest and most respected newsrooms around the world from Afghanistan to India to Kenya. Partnering with legacy news outlets ensures our rigorous reporting reaches the broadest global audiences.

ISSUE AREAS

The Fuller Project focuses on three issue areas, revealing how these issues interact in the lives of women, often exposing compounding challenges.

ECONOMY & LABOR

CLIMATE

HEALTH

Join this community and invest in our vision for journalism that spurs gender equality. Contact Leslie Bernard at lbernard@fullerproject.org or go to Fullerproject.org/support-us/ to learn more.

Visit our website: